

GUIDE TO MAPS 1 AND 2

The maps contained in the Reply Brief are based on listings in the GunBroker website from May 8 to 10, 2015. (Gunbroker is the source amicus Everytown used to discuss FFLs willing to facilitate private transfers.) Every Colorado FFL who uses the Gunbroker site is listed in the data set. Also recorded is whatever information the FFL provided about fees. The complete list is attached hereto, organized by zip code. The list was compiled by Joseph Greenlee, who is co-counsel to the Sheriffs.

HB1229 sets a fee cap of $10 for private intrastate transfers. There is no fee cap for private interstate transfers. In addition to the $10 convenience fee, FFLs can also pass through the separate fee which the Colorado Bureau of Investigation charges to conduct background checks. This fee used to be $10, and has recently been reduced to $7. On the website, some FFLs itemized these separate fees, and sometimes they did not. If the FFL indicated that it would perform a transfer for $20 less, it was assumed that the FFL would do HB1229 transfers. Currently, the maximum that can legally be charged is $17 ($7 to CBI, plus $10 for the FFL). It was also assumed that FFLs who offered transfer services for $20 had not updated their GunBroker listing to reflect the CBI fee reduction.

The list of FFLs as retail stores or home-based businesses, also attached hereto, was compiled by Sarah Bouma, Creative Assistant at the Independence Institute. GunBroker was used, plus any FFL website that was linked via GunBroker. A few FFLs had no physical address, or only had a Post Office box; it was assumed that these were home-based businesses, and not retail stores.

For FFLs who had street addresses, the photography on Google Maps was used to view the FFL's building and neighborhood. Most of the actual retail storefronts had a website and a clear image of a commercial neighborhood via Google Maps.

Map 2 consists of small circles that are ten mile radius markers (to scale) placed on the street address of the FFL. There are three different patterns to distinguish each type of store. The regular grey dots are public gun stores or sporting goods stores. The opacity of them is less than 100% so that overlap can be seen. The dots made out of a gradient represent pawn shops. The dots with the line pattern inside are FFLs that are attached to some other type of store, such as a tractor store or a camouflage dying business.
